“Are American Negroes simply the creation of white men, or have they at least helped to create themselves out of what they found around them? Men have made a way of life in caves and upon cliffs, why cannot Negroes have made a life upon the horns of the white man’s dilemma?”

—Ralph Ellison (An American 1944)

Course Description and Overview

The aim of this course is to develop a general reading knowledge of the traditions, contexts, and trajectories of Black intellectual discourse during the 20th Century, particularly from the time of the Great Migration of African Americans from the rural South to the urban North. The emphasis will be placed on foundational texts in the field, yet students can expect to engage a wide range of works representing the diversity of Black thought in the 20th Century. The work of contemporary historians and other scholars (secondary sources) will provide background and context to supplement our reading of the foundational texts (primary sources) in the field.

In the course we will trace the continuities and disjunctures in the texts produced by Black intellectuals in the so-called American century. Taking our cue from the questions Ralph Ellison posed back in 1944, we will explore how Black writers and political figures have fashioned unique sets of ideas and arguments aimed at addressing the condition of being Black in an anti-Black society—ideas and arguments that often focused on the question of identity and the meaning of freedom.

This course has four specific objectives:

1. To further develop students’ critical study of American culture and history through an interdisciplinary examination of such important topics as race and racism, class and economic inequality, gender and sexism, and how what we in the academy say about these topics matters.

2. To introduce students to the key terms of debate in the study of African American thought and culture(s) and to chart the significant impact of Black intellectual discourses on U.S. institutions, communities, and individuals.
3. To expose students to a wide range of writers and speakers in the Black intellectual tradition in order to aid you in developing well-grounded approaches to the study of the history of ideas and the social role of intellectuals in modern American society.

4. To guide students in strengthening their skills at “reading” American culture and history, with the aim of being able to write well-formed essays based on their “readings.”

Logistics and Policies [PLEASE REFER TO THIS SYLLABUS & CONSIDER WHETHER YOUR QUESTION CAN BE ANSWERED HERE]

You can reach me by email, in my office hours, or by appointment at any time during the quarter. I respond to students’ emails by 10am every weekday; I do not answer students’ emails on weekends.

I do not accept late assignments. In case of a medical/personal emergency, you must produce a doctor’s note or other documentation in order for an exception to be made.

This syllabus is subject to change; any changes will be announced well in advance in class or by email.

I would prefer that you do not use computers during class sessions, even to take notes. If this is a problem for you, please let me know and we can discuss accommodations.

Turn off phones and refrain from text messaging during class. If I notice you texting, I will ask you to leave the classroom and that will count as an absence.

*Attendance and participation constitute a significant portion of your grade. Arrive to each class session on time and stay for its duration. Tardiness and absences will be noted and result in the lowering of your grade. Since we only meet 10 times in the quarter, more than two absences will result in a failing grade.

*Active participation means thoughtful engagement in the readings/lectures, meaningful contributions to class discussions, and respectful collegiality toward your classmates and instructor. Visits to my office hours will also count toward class participation.

* Some possible questions to consider each week are:

1. What was the general argument or point the author or editor made?
2. What major premises, themes, and concepts of culture or race, did the author employ?
3. What evidence did the author use? (i.e. scientific, ethnographic, personal experience)
4. How were ideas about “America” or the ideology of democracy engaged?
5. Who was the audience, why was that audience chosen, and how was it received?
6. What intellectuals (or schools of thought) was this author engaged in a dialogue with or drew from?

*The Midterm exam will consist of a short essay (3-4 pages, double-spaced) in response to a question I pose that addresses key themes in Black intellectual discourse drawn from the readings of the first half of the course. Students will be able to choose between two questions/prompts, which will be handed out in class on October 17th, and be due at the Ethnic Studies Dept. office by 3pm, October 21st.

*The Final exam will consist of a longer essay (6-7pgs double-spaced), which will synthesize material from the whole course. Students will have a choice of answering one of three questions/prompts. I will hand out the Final at the last class, on November 28th, and it will be due in my office by Thursday, December 8th at 7pm.

For both the Midterm and the Final, I will provide considerably more details in a separate handout and discussion. Also I will not accept any late exam submissions.

Grading Standards:
A Superior performance; meets assignment requirements, and demonstrates exceptional execution of those requirements; reflects outstanding insight and depth; grammatically and stylistically excellent; would be considered a model example of assignment completion.
B Good, solid performance; meets assignment requirements, and demonstrates competent execution of those requirements; reflects insight and depth; grammatically and stylistically strong; may have one or more problem areas.
C Average performance; meets assignment requirements, minimally; grammatically and stylistically adequate; may have two or more problem areas; paper has more than two errors per page.
D Below average performance; does not meet minimal assignment requirements; has several fundamental problem areas; has several errors throughout the paper.
F Inferior performance; does not meet assignment requirements; not deserving of credit.
