Course Description
This course is a study of African American humor, particularly in performance, from slavery (ca. 18th century) to today. The humor of African Americans has historically been divided, consisting of humor created by and for a black audience, and humor performed for a white audience. We will investigate the origins of this division, and the ways in which African American humor has shaped American culture. Keeping in mind the social and cultural context in which African American humor emerged and developed, we will take an interdisciplinary approach to our subject. We will use various materials from cartoons, folklore, literature, and film (among others) to study the African American comic tradition.

Required Texts
Joseph Boskin, Sambo: The Rise and Demise of an American Jester
Mel Watkins, On the Real Side
Course Reader (CR) from University Readers—available online at universityreaders.com

Assignments Detailed:

Journals:
During the first four weeks of the course, you will keep a journal and submit it once. You are required to write two entries per week, and each entry should be one full page, 12-point font, single-spaced. This assignment gives you an opportunity to write informally about the texts that you are reading. Pick your own topic for discussion, but commit to it, and do not summarize. I want your reaction to the text. You may 1) analyze some argument that the text puts forth; 2) read a passage closely on it and reflect on its meaning, relating it to the course (and our classroom discussion). You will have a total of 7 entries for the assignment.

Midterm: Mid-quarter review of themes and material (lectures and reading) covered.

Final exam: A cumulative review of entire quarter’s themes and subjects of discussion.
