Course Description
This course is a study of African American humor, particularly in performance, from slavery (ca. 18th century) to today. The humor of African Americans has historically been divided, consisting of humor created by and for a black audience, and humor performed for a white audience. We will investigate the origins of this division, and the ways in which African American humor has shaped American culture. Keeping in mind the social and cultural context in which African American humor emerged and developed, we will take an interdisciplinary approach to our subject. We will use various materials from cartoons, folklore, literature, and film (among others) to study the African American comic tradition.

Required Texts
Joseph Boskin, Sambo: The Rise and Demise of an American Jester
Mel Watkins, On the Real Side
Course Reader (CR) from University Readers—available online at universityreaders.com

Assignments Detailed:
One-page typed critical responses: You will be assigned a group (either 1 or 2), and will submit a reading response, as noted on the syllabus, at the beginning of the class period on those days. These are intended for you to engage with the ideas raised by readings, and will help you with your in-class contributions. I will give you a question to address the Thursday before the one-pager is due, which will help you as you write your response.

Midterm: Mid-quarter review of themes and material (lectures and reading) covered.

Final exam: A cumulative review of entire quarter’s themes and subjects of discussion.

10-minute Presentation: Working in groups, you will introduce the life and career of comedian not discussed in class. You must use outside materials (beyond course packet and our other texts) for this project, and audio-visual materials all greatly welcomed!
