Course materials are available on TritonEd at https://TritonEd.ucsd.edu. From the main TritonEd page for poli122, click on “Content” in the upper left menu. This will bring you to the course syllabus, lecture slides, research guides, rubrics, TII.com and PeerMark access.

Rights are inescapably political because they tacitly imply a conflict between a rights holder and a rights ‘withholder,’ some authority against which the rights holder can make justified claims...Human rights exist to adjudicate these conflicts, to define the irreducible minimum beyond which group and collective claims must not go in constraining the lives of individuals.

--Michael Ignatieff, "Human Rights as Politics"

Course Description
What do we mean by “human rights”? Are these rights universal? How are they legitimated by victims and their advocates? Under what conditions have human rights been most systematically violated since the drafting of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) in 1948? Who were the primary violators, and who were the victims? What types of international, state, or local institutions have been most effective in addressing these violations, and why? What have been, or should have been, the respective roles of international institutions, states, citizens, and non-governmental organizations in promoting human rights protections? Why should “we” (in the United States) care about promoting human rights abroad, or should we? What are the trade-offs between national sovereignty and international action in compelling respect for human rights?

These are some of the central questions that we will explore over the course of the quarter through select case studies of human rights abuse and redress since the drafting of the UDHR. For each case study, we will consider the following questions: How, and why, did demands for human rights protection first emerge? Who were its primary advocates? What types of resources did these advocates mobilize in their defense, or in the defense of others? Were their claims valid? Why, or why not? What was the response of state actors? What was the response of international actors? What types of institutions or policies were marshalled at local, state, or international levels to address international human rights violations? Were these institutions and policies effective? Why, or why not? Should different actions have been taken to address abuses? Why, or why not?

Course Learning Outcomes
Upon successful completion of this course, you will be able to:
(1) Critically evaluate and explain relativist and universalist perspectives on human rights, acknowledging strongest arguments, and evidence, for and against each perspective.
(2) Demonstrate knowledge of, critically evaluate, and discuss current international human rights laws and covenants.
(3) Demonstrate knowledge of, critically evaluate, and discuss relevant United Nations institutions and policies designed to promote and protect these laws and covenants.
(4) Demonstrate knowledge of, critically evaluate, and discuss specific case studies of human rights abuse and redress in the post-WWII period, and the role of local, national, and international actors, interests, and institutions in these case studies.

(5) Demonstrate knowledge of, critically evaluate, and discuss the relative value of competing conceptions and theories of human rights in explaining and predicting human rights abuse and redress in the post-WWII period.

(6) Demonstrate proficiency in analyzing a specific contemporary human rights policy problem in a country case study of your choice, identifying and critiquing competing proposals by key stakeholders, and formulating a specific and concise policy recommendation based on high quality evidence, using the format of a professional policy paper.

Summary of Course Requirements

(1) Class participation: peer instruction/clickers
(2) Policy proposal
  - E-version due to TII.com on TritonEd week 3, Wed, 4/17, before 11:59 pm
(4) Midterm exam: week 4, Thursday (in class)
(5) First draft policy brief (1500 word min.)
  - E-version due to TII.com on TritonEd: week 7, Wed, 5/15, before 11:59 pm
  - Most important deadline in the class. Please upload early.
  - Technology (peer review) prevents us from allowing late papers on this assignment.
(6) Feedback to two peers due to TritonEd: week 8, Wed, 5/22, before 11:59 pm
  - Please upload early: PeerMark features on TritonEd do not allow late uploads.
(7) Final policy papers due: week 9 (both deadlines must be met to avoid late penalty)
  - E-version due to TritonEd, before 11:59 pm, Wed., 5/29
  - Identical print copy, end of class Thursday, 5/30
(8) Final exam: Tuesday, 11 June, 11:30 – 2:30

Exams

There are two exams in this course: a midterm and a final. Both include short answer identification concept questions and an in-class essay. The midterm covers weeks 1 – 4, and the final exam is cumulative. Please note that exams cannot be made up without well-documented evidence of an emergency, or prior approval by the instructor.

Research Project

This course also requires that you research and write a short (8 – 10 page, double-spaced, 12 pt. font, 1 inch margins) policy paper focused on a specific human rights violation of your choice. For the purposes of this assignment, you will become a policy analyst employed by a human rights organization of your choice. You will need to focus on a specific human rights problem and reference (either in a footnote or in the text of your paper) the specific international human rights covenant and article that you are investigating (i.e. ICCPR, Article 8.3 (a) "No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour"). For your case study, you may choose any country in the world (including the United States), or a state, province, or city within this country. The only requirement is that you choose a case study not covered in the course and that you have not written about previously. You will need to research both the organization you represent and the policy maker(s) you target in order to better understand their organizational and institutional histories, perspectives, and policy stances. The research assignment is designed to provide you with the opportunity to engage in more in-depth analysis of a human rights problem of particular interest to you, and further develop your research and writing skills in critically engaging human rights questions using high quality sources of evidence. Because of the size of the class, and the importance of maintaining standards of fairness for all students, late assignments will be penalized 5 pts. for each 24-hour period that they are late, with the exception of the first draft of your paper and peer review of this paper, where, due to PeerMark technology, no late assignments can be accepted. Please note that there are two deadlines for the final policy paper: (1) submission of e-version to TII.com, and (2) submission of print copy by the end of class. Both deadlines must be met to avoid a late penalty. Please also note that e-mailed versions of assignments cannot be accepted under any circumstances. If you have missed a deadline, please bring a hard copy to class or to my office as soon as possible after the deadline (please place in the manila envelope outside my office door), and attach a note explaining the extenuating circumstance. A detailed guide and grading rubric are posted to TritonEd, course content page, and a guide to library resources can be found here: http://ucsd.libguides.com/humanrights. If you need help narrowing your topic, or if you run into problems finding information on the topic you’ve chosen, please consult one of the TAs, a reference librarian at Geisel, or me.

Class Participation
As an upper-division political science course, you are expected to come to class meetings prepared to discuss central questions, puzzles, and concerns that arise from course readings assigned for that day. Evidence-based research on teaching and learning has documented a strong causal relationship between active participation/discussion and student learning. The risk of large courses like ours is that students miss out on the opportunity to meaningfully discuss course materials, and thus learn less. For this reason, I will use a relatively new pedagogy in Political Science, “Peer Instruction” (used with clickers), developed by Harvard physicist, Eric Mazur, to facilitate both small and large group discussions. Research has documented statistically significant learning gains for students who have used Peer Instruction (PI). Here's a cool YouTube where Eric Mazur talks about this pedagogy: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Z9orbxoRofI

We will begin experimenting with PI and clickers during week 2, but the “official” counting period will not begin until week 3 (April 17). This should give you time to borrow or purchase a clicker. (You can buy used online and sell back after the course, or borrow from a friend who’s not using during our class period). Questions will be geared toward enhancing your understanding of course readings and lectures, and will help you prepare for exams and policy paper projects. In general, we will ask two types of questions: factual and discussion questions. Factual questions focus on a central point from your readings, or a point covered in lectures. Pedagogically, these questions are used to strengthen critical reading and thinking skills, and ensure that central concepts are generally understood before moving to a new topic. One point is given for correct answers, and .7 for participating. Discussion questions ask that you take a stand on a particular human rights problem or issue using course materials as evidence. These questions are used to hone critical thinking and speaking skills, and specifically, your ability to put forth persuasive arguments based on logic and compelling evidence. For discussion questions, you will receive full points (1 pt.) simply for participating. In assessing your grade for this component of the course, you're allowed to miss 20%. This should provide sufficient buffer in case you forget your clicker or you need to miss class for whatever reason. So, for example, if we ask 40 questions total over the quarter, and you receive 30 points, you can still earn an “A” (20% of 40 is 32, and 30/32 = 93.75%).

Films
In addition to the course text, research articles, lectures, and class discussion, this course will also use film to deepen our understanding of the politics of human rights. In many cases, this will allow us to hear the voices of human rights victims, policy makers, and perpetrators of violations. A significant body of literature provides evidence for the value of film to deepen understanding and retention of course materials. Although we'll only watch short excerpts of films in case, if you’d like to watch any of these films in their entirety, they've been scanned and are available via e-reserves for the course: https://reserves.ucsd.edu

E-mail policy
Please use the designated forums on the TritonEd discussion board for all course and assignment related questions so that everyone can benefit from information exchanged. Your TAs and I will monitor the board M-F, but please also feel free to help each other out, especially on weekends. Due to the size of our class, this will be the most efficient way for us to communicate. Because of the volume of e-mail we all receive, let’s try to reserve email for urgent personal matters, etc. Instead, I’m always available after class and during office hours, so let’s try to get to know each other this way. Due to family obligations on weekends, I will not have Internet access after 5 pm on Fridays until Monday mornings. If you should need to urgently reach me on the weekend, however, you can call me at home: 858.552.9264. If you do need to send email M-F, please be sure to put the course number (poli122) in the subject line so that I can quickly locate it. Thanks!

Inclusive Classroom
Your TAs and I are fully committed to creating a learning environment that supports diversity of thought, perspectives, experiences, and identities. We urge each of you to contribute your unique perspectives to discussions of course questions, themes, and materials so that we can learn from them, and from each other. If you should ever feel excluded, or unable to fully participate in class for any reason, please let me know, or you may also submit anonymous written feedback to our Undergraduate Advisor, Natalie Ikker. Please simply place your written feedback in an envelope with the course name and number, and bring to the front desk of the Political Science Department, addressed to Natalie. Natalie will bring these comments to my attention. Course Text

Should you choose not to purchase the DeLaet book, it is available via print reserves at Geisel Library, with the first three chapters scanned into e-reserves. (This is the maximum allowed under copyright.) If you experience any problems accessing print reserves copies, please let me or one of your TAs know right away.

If you would like to purchase the book, it’s available as an e-book from UCSD Bookstore for $22.49 via TritonEd. You can try this out for free for the first two weeks of classes. After two weeks, unless you opt-out, the Bookstore will charge your student account by this amount. If you decide to opt-out you need to complete this process by April 13, 2019.
• Click here to view how to access your course materials or opt-out.
• For any questions about billing please contact textbooks@ucsd.edu.
• For any questions about using your eBook please reference RedShelf Solve.
• If you have any trouble accessing your eBook please feel free to reach out to help@redshelf.com.
Alternatively, you may purchase new or used copies of the book online, and sell back after the course. All additional course readings (articles, etc.) are available (free!) via electronic reserves from Geisel Library: https://reserves.ucsd.edu. If you encounter any problems, please call 858.534.1212, or e-mail: reserves@ucsd.edu, or contact me.

Course Schedule:
*Note: Although it is rare that readings are revised during the quarter, occasionally I may do so to respond to a current human rights event, or important emergent interests in the class. If there is a revision, I will always provide advanced notice, and updates will be posted on course lecture slides.
