In this course, we will analyze major themes in Marxist political thought, from its roots in Western Europe in the work of John Locke, Jean-Jacques Rousseau, and G. W. F. Hegel to its elaboration by twentieth-century thinker-activists in Asia, Africa, and Latin America. Emphasis will be placed on the position of Marx’s and Engels’s conception of politics as an outgrowth of the tradition of “modern” Western political thought. We will examine Marxism as it emerged in response to the changing socio-economic setting of Western Europe and conclude with an assessment of how effectively non-European theorists adapted Marxism to their own national contexts. We will conclude by assessing the continued relevance of the Marxian paradigm of development and revolutionary change in the post-industrial world of the 21st century. Students enrolled in the course are not expected to have a background in the subject matter, although those who have studied political theory and/or world history will find that experience helpful.

As all required readings are available on reserve at Geisel Library. In addition to the books ordered for the course, there is a reader for the course. The reader is available for purchase online by going to http://www.universityreaders.com and clicking on the "STUDENTS BUY HERE" button. Since the reader is not inexpensive (because some of the readings were not available in book form), copies of the reader will also be available on reserve. Note: All readings from the Reader are indicated with (R) on the syllabus.

In addition, the following books are been ordered for purchase at the University Bookstore.

- Frantz Fanon, Wretched of the Earth (Grove Press, 2005), paper (ISBN780802141323)
- Jean-Jacques Rousseau, The First and Second Discourses (St. Martin’s Press), paper 0-312-69440-7
