Through an examination of classic texts in political and social theory, news clippings and editorials, speeches, literature, art, architecture, diagrams and documentary, we will explore two general themes: 1) the ways that individuals and groups are consciously and unconsciously shaped, motivated, coerced by manifestations of power in the social and political world; and 2) theories and practices of resistance that challenge modes of power claimed to be unjust.

Course texts and resources
All texts are available on CANVAS (as PDFs or web links).

Requirements
Two in-class open-text midterm exams during weeks 5 and 10 (40%); and one 6-8 page take-home final project due during exam week (50%). The remaining 10% will be at the discretion of your TA, based upon attendance and participation in section.

Only your highest midterm grade will “count” toward the calculation of your final grade, which is our way of encouraging efforts at improvement. Game this as you wish. The choice is for your benefit. Final project prompt will be distributed during week 8, and due at NOON on Wednesday March 18. There is no sit-down final exam in this class.

The two opportunities for extra credit in weeks 5 and 7, if done well, can each increase your grade by 2%.

Significant improvement in written work will be considered when calculating final grade. Hate to mention it, but plagiarism will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of university policy. All take-home assignments will be submitted through turnitin.

Frequent announcements will be distributed by email. Please check your UCSD email regularly. Our class listserv only works with UCSD email accounts.
